Legend of the Tuscaroras

In the vale of Lake Keuka,
By the bright and gleaming waters,
In the moonlight and the starlight,
In the checkered shade and sunshine,
Stood the lodge of four tribes gathered;
With the Senecas the oldest,
Next to them the Onondagas,
And the third, the tribe of Mohawks.
But of all, the youngest, newest,
Was the tribe of Tuscaroras.
Tribes they were who made tradition;
Made it in their years at Keuka.

Then the Senecas had left us.
Lonely was our lodge without them.
But then later when the Autumn
Changed the long green leaves to yellow,
The new Senecas were welcomed.
Tuscaroras sought them, taught them
To be Keuka's own true daughters.

As they grew to be the wiser,
Our Big Sisters, Onondagas,
Passed from out our lodgehouse walls;
Left us sadly, grieving ever;
Left their Sisters standing lonely
At the doorway of their wigwam.

But in the Moon of Falling Leaves
Came the strangers whom we knew not,
Onondagas, Little Sisters.
Then the time for us passed gaily.
Found we then new friendships dear.

Came the day when sun descending
O'er the lake of bluest water,
Found upon a distant shoreline
Campfires for our night encampment;
Tuscaroras round it gathered,
Heard the dreamy near-by water,
Heard the Tuscaroras secrets.

In the early gray of morning
Came we home by wooded pathways,
With new visions of the future
Came the Tuscarora maidens.

By the Crooked Lake of Waters
Rise the tall and stately oak trees,
'Neath the sweeping storms of winter,
Gusty winds of spring and summer,
Sundered not, nor ever yielding,
Brave may be the Tuscaroras,
Yielding not though life be dreary,
Thinking ever of the oak trees,
Restless, struggling, toiling, striving,
Brave may be the Tuscaroras
Many moons and many winters,
Till their lives be bright and joyous
In the distant days that shall be.

The Senecas

The Senecas have come to pow-pow. Three years they have been riding, riding—seeking the trail, searching for signs. At first they only dreamed of the sacred fire and the mystic rites. Then, too eager, they sought to gain early knowledge from an older tribe. But ill success attended them and they rode on, seeking, seeking.

The slow moons waxed and waned. The time of their testing was almost complete. The trail became more open, signs were everywhere. At length the very fire was in sight. And gathered round it were the older Senecas, who had made the first long trail and touched flint to kindle the first council fire.

How gladly did the Senecas gather together, how eagerly did the new tribe listen to the words of the old, how joyfully did they enter upon the tribal ceremonies and receive the tribal secrets!

The Senecas had come to pow-pow. No longer were they seeking the trail. They had become the Keepers of the Western Gate. And in the light of the leaping flames did they solemnly vow to live worthy members of a worthy tribe, till the Great Spirit should call, and they should go at last to join their ancestors in the Happy Hunting Grounds.

The Onondagas

The Onondagas have passed from the ranks of the tenderfoot braves, into the numberless legions of the initiated. Proud of their recent accomplishment they have devoted these thirteen moons to the education and guidance of a younger tribe.

What rigid tasks they have set them, what stiff endurance and what hardy reserve have they demanded! And yet, how kind the Onondagas to teach these children the ways of the Four Nations!

But their reward is come, their duty is fulfilled. Henceforth they are responsible for none but themselves. And the Mohawks may learn again what the Onondagas have tried to teach them when the second tribe of Tuscaroras comes to our midst.

The Mohawks

We, the second generation of Mohawks, are here! We have entered, sixty-six strong, firm in the determination to engage in all honorable contest to carry on the traditions of our ancestors—the worthy Tribe of '27.

The braves of '31 are youthful as yet and somewhat unskilled in the art of tribal conflict. But offsetting this is a spirit so dauntless that it has carried us through the encounters of the year with proudly waving feathers and undimmed warpaint.

Our first sally-forth was at Point Neamo. Around a blazing fire our stalwart warriors squatted. Scouts were among us even then, that cool autumn morning, to find out who were the most trustworthy and daring. Shortly thereafter a council was held at which war chiefs were chosen, and before anyone else realized it, we were drawn up in true battle formation.

Our third week at Keuka was filled with harrowing incidents. The Onondagas descended upon us with their merciless hordes. They strove to intimidate us and cove our noble spirits. But with the stoicism of our race we endured their oppression uncomplainingly.

Our tribe was organized in due time, and at Thanksgiving our Mohawk Sisters returned to give us the mystic symbols and to teach us the secret rituals.

In the first moon of the new year we entertained our allies, the Senecas, around our council fire. We owe this tribe more than one offer of the peace pipe—some day, perhaps, the debt will be paid.

One calm evening in the second moon, while at our evening feast, the Onondagas, enemies of an ancient feud, rushed in and scalped us. Perhaps this was a signal that we had become full-fledged warriors, proficient in daubing on the war paint and arranging our campaigns.

We have lost our scalps; but now at the end of the year we have feathers in our war bonnets, many colored and various feathers, each representing a signal victory. Oh, Great Spirit, abide with us until our feathers are many more, and we have honored the memory of our ancestors!

Student Government Association

The existence of a student government presupposes the right and the ability of the students to think. We think when we elect officers, we think, perhaps too late, when we see our names on the black list.

Nevertheless, we know that student government is the most basic feature of our life here at Keuka, and the most necessary. Each girl is a member of this organization with her part in its activities. She is bound to uphold its ideals for she has created them. She is the student government.

The aims of the Association are: to formulate laws that express the will of the student and faculty concerning the organization and conduct of those who come under its authority; to expose and uphold all such principles of justice as tend to promote scholarship and personal integrity; to establish and confirm such relations between faculty and students that shall enlist the active cooperation of all.

By no means the greatest part of the activities of the Association is the formulating of rules of conduct. The council this year has thoroughly revised the point system in relation to extra-curricular activities, drawn up some excellent general rules for all clubs and organizations, besides making a splendid success of the entire Thanksgiving-Day program.

Y. W. C. A

The Y. W. C. A. has each year an increasingly greater part in our college life. What with its reception, membership drives, Japanese Bazaar, teas, candle-light ceremonies, and weekly vesper services, we feel its influence everywhere.

The committee system, whereby each student is a member of one of the various committees, gives every student a place to fill, and insures cooperation for organized endeavor.

Science Club

The Science Club is just recently organized for the benefit of students interested in scientific research and current scientific discoveries. Winifred Morrison has been elected president. Reports and discussion form the basis for many an enjoyable social hour.

History Club

"History repeats itself"—but the History Club, never. If at one meeting you discuss the dates of ancient manuscripts, at the next you may hear the latest developments of the Big Bill Thompson case. Some interesting historic subject is always being investigated and reported on.

And it is rumored that in the very near future the club intends visiting the scene of some recent Indian excavations. No wonder Professors Winters and Blodgett do not worry about membership campaigns.

President.....ELIZABETH DOLING
Vice-President.....ADA McNITT
Secretary.....BESSIE TRIMMINGHAM

Home Economics Club

Here we have future cafeteria managers and expert hospital dieticians. Yet their concern is not all for the future. They pause quite frequently to give teas, parties, and other delightful social functions.

League of Women Voters

If you are a believer in universal suffrage and women's rights, your place is in the League of Women Voters. If you are not a believer you should join anyway and learn what it is all about.

Informal reports and discussions present interesting political information at each meeting. The organization aims to keep informed upon state and national legislation, and in this way to promote a more intelligent use of the ballot.

President.....MARCIA CLARK
 Secretary-Treasurer.....ERMA WETHY

Classical Club

Organized this year by Dr. Lougee, head of the ancient foreign languages department, the Classical Club is composed of Seniors who are majoring or minoring in Latin. Apparently unable to imbibe enough of the classics during class hours, these seekers after wisdom gather together for further research and study. We admire their spirit and hope they may derive all kinds of benefit from their hobnobbing with the ancients.

They call themselves the CADUCEANS.

Elea

In days of old the island of Elea could well boast of its great philosophers. Our Elea at Keuka has not done any boasting though it is the only club to which members are admitted on a basis of scholarship.

With the help of Miss Hall, and Mr. Blodgett, of the English department, this honorary literary society considers some interesting phase of literature each year. The subject chosen for study this year was modern English and American poetry.

President	FERN BISHOP
Vice-President	BEATRICE KENYON
Secretary-Treasurer	CATHERINE HUYCK

Student Volunteers

Students who have pledged themselves to mission service either at home or abroad band together here as part of the national organization of Student Volunteers. They hold prayer meetings and Sunday afternoon services, with often an outside speaker of experience. The common theme of service fills their meetings with inspiration and fellowship.

President.....RUTH SOWLE
Secretary-Treasurer.....KATHERINE FISHER

Choir

The choir in its black and white robes is an indispensable part of the music and the devotional atmosphere of the church services. Until this year its membership has been voluntary, but from now on one-half hour's credit a semester is offered.

Orchestra

Thump-thump-therrrump! What is this we hear? Tap, tap—"A" please! Everyone in tune? Yes, this is the Keuka College Orchestra, always in tune to perform at recitals, provide the musical atmosphere necessary for social functions, or entertain individually.

To Miss Deck is due a great part of the credit for the success of the year's presentation. The study of operetta which she has initiated has proved a jolly and helpful diversion.

Keukonian

Perhaps your acquaintance with Keukonian begins when you hear the slithering sound of the latest edition coming under the door. Or perhaps you are a future editor with a nose for news and a calling for copy.

In either case you cannot but be aware that a flourishing bi-monthly college newspaper—to be specific, the Keukonian—is a fine thing. The Campus Squirrel keeps us amused, Table Talk keeps us up on the topics of the day, and the editorials show us what we ought to be thinking about.

Keuka has come to the end of her second season in intercollegiate debating, with two victories, one tied decision, and one defeat. If debating were a time honored activity here, we might reasonably congratulate ourselves for the season's remarkable success. But taking into account the fact that we have been debating only two years, (and only one debate was held the first year), such success is almost spectacular.

Keuka won the decision from Wheaton and St. Lawrence, tied with Albany State, and lost to Bucknell, on the question: Resolved, That the United States should cease to protect by armed force capital invested in foreign lands until after formal declaration of war.

Miss Hall, director and head of the English department, has made debate possible at Keuka. She has had an unflinching belief in its future, and her enthusiasm has been justified by the year's success.

Dramatics

The Dramatic Association is open to anyone interested in dramatics, "without work". It has general charge of all the plays produced at Keuka.

However, if one desires to "strut and fret his hour upon the stage", there is the Gargoyle Club, the first stepping-stone to dramatic achievement. This club is concerned with general dramatic education and individual development.

The Arion Club requires a tryout before admission. Casts for all major plays are taken from the Arions, and it is an honor to wear their pin.

Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion was well received as last year's June Play. The rich Irish humor and the novelty of the plot, together with the clever characterizations assured its success.

Sun-Up

A three act play by LULU VOLLMER

Sun-Up was a play that will not soon be forgotten. Produced March 31, by the Arion Club, it was an ambitious but successful production. The lighting, stage properties, and characterization all demanded something extraordinary.

And anyone who saw the spectacle of the dawn creeping up over the snow-clad mountains, felt the boundless courage of Mrs. Cagle in the face of insurmountable difficulties, and the heroic sacrifices of the young son, Rufe, will admit that it was indeed an unforgettable experience.

Taxi

CAST

Madge Kimberly.....Edna Fredericks
Alexander Kimberly.....Beatrice Kenyon

The one-act play, Taxi, by Alice Riley, was such a real experience to the audience that after it was over we actually expected to find bumps on our heads and various other black and blue spots from the terrible jolts and jars that taxi gave us.

When Mr. and Mrs. Kimberly jumped into the same cab from opposite sides of the street and both gave the hasty order, "Pennsylvania Station," they had no idea of meeting their quondam life partners. And certainly, when they realized such a meeting was taking place, they did not intend to seize upon those moments to gather up the ravelled strands of the sacred knot.

Mrs. Kimberly insisted that Mr. Kimberly get out. But Mr. Kimberly wouldn't give up his taxi to any woman. And soon the new argument involved the old. Until—one terrific jounce and one overwhelming argument threw them into an embrace that has justified every Taxi ever since.

Colonial Party

Did you go to Colonial Party? How was it? Best yet! Everyone says so.

That charming colonial garden was arbored and trellised, and adorned with even a tulip bordered flagged path and a sun dial. Some very pretty and entertaining skits were given in the garden, and last of all, in the balcony, there were little tables with refreshments served by demure colonial maids.

The Evening

Evening rides o'er hill and vale
Upon his swarthy steed,
He wears a cloak of velvet blue,
Upon it one lone star,
A favor from his lady, Night,
Who smiled and pinned it there.

Upon her royal gown.

Dr. Dwight's Classroom Appetisers

Keep first things first.
Live for the major interests of life.
My mind to me a kingdom is.
Man is both the fight and the fighter too.
Man is a reed, but a thinking reed.
Drive carefully, you may meet a fool.
An opinion is an occasional thought.
Select your grandparents with care.
All the child must go to school.
In the world there is nothing great but man, and in man there is nothing great but mind.
In education, don't cut off the tadpole's tail.
Imagination rules the world.
Many meet the gods but few salute them.
Man is a measure of all things, of those that are, that they are; and of those that are not, that they are not.
To think for oneself is not to think by oneself.
Man is a mirror to his fellows, and they are periscopes to him.
Beware of a false antithesis.
Be governed by your admiration rather than by your antithesis.
All or none.
Think it possible that you might be mistaken.
Heaven is a good place, but keep out of it as long as you can.

Teaching

To teach
Is not alone to tell
A thing or two, and say it well,
And knock into the denser pates
A repertoire of facts and dates;

To teach
Is not alone to drill,
And force to march up Learning's hill
Upon their bowed and weary legs
A squad of little human pegs;

To teach
Is not alone to curb
Unruly youths who school disturb,
And make reports and hand out grades
And deal with pupils as with shades;

To teach?
It is to reach, to find
The hidden laws of growing mind,
In boy to see the coming man—
Then shape him to a splendid plan—
This is to teach!

C. A. S. Dwight

INSTINCT AND REASON

Instinct is that unconscious impulse, that original gift perfect from the start and to which the future will add nothing; that something which teaches the bird to build her nest, the bees to construct their combs, the ants their hillock, the beaver his dwelling, the spider her web.

Reason is that divine gift to man by which he links cause with effect; it is the tribunal before which our shortcomings should be summoned and made to answer whether we are less provident than the insect which is guided by a knowledge gained without a teacher.

Let us assist you in carrying out certain financial plans which reason dictates should be made for the future.

COMPLIMENTS OF

Elizabeth Liebig, '27

Translation in Cicero: "If she hadn't met her death on that day she would only have had to die later."

Dr. Lougee: I suppose the moral is, "Don't put off till tomorrow what you can do today!"

Dr. Lougee: "I was an unusually good speller when I was quite young. Why, I could spell delightfully then."

Henrie: "Oh, I can spell that too."

Dr. Dwight: "If you ever fall into salt water, just paddle around and you'll keep up all right, that is, if you're not in a tight place."

Translation in Cicero: "Not only does my mind shudder at the mention of such deeds, but my ears shrink from memory of them."

Miss Hall in Shakespeare Class: "You have to use some discrimination in reading Shakespearian criticism. Now if you had passed over that bit I would have given you A."

Confidential whisper from Jay: "I skipped it!"
